Motorola Q Wiki

Introduction

The Motorola Q is a Windows-based mobile phone and e-mail device that fits in your pocket. Fully tricked-out, it can duplicate many of the functions of a computer, including MS document processing, handling business and personal e-mail, accessing the Internet, playing music and more.

Because the possible applications for the Q will always expand, the "ideal" user guide would also be able to grow and change. This wiki is an attempt to do that. It's a place to capture and share the knowledge of the greater community of Q users. If, for example, you have added a new application to your Q, you could post instructions on how you did it here, for the benefit of all Q users.

This site has been established by Motorola for the use of Q users. It has been seeded with the contents of the in-box user guide. Additional content will be provided by Q users as they explore the Q's capabilities.

Medical dictionary wiki

From Meta

Note: This idea, due to its legal nature, is very, very likely to cause arguments and disputes. Please read the entire proposal before commenting on it, so you understand the measures that can be taken to ensure that this is a safe project.

This is a recent proposal. If you feel anything is missing from the text, you have a question, or you'd like to bring something up, please bring it up on the talk page. This has also been discussed on the mailing list.

Update: A test wiki has been established for developing the typical idea of an article, as well as our policies and self-identity.

The eventual goal of the Wikimedia Foundation is to provide neutral and factually accurate information for the entire world for free. Part of that goal should include the ability to treat illnesses and provide medical assistance in areas where medical professionals aren't widely available. While this is a long-term goal, we believe that through the cooperation of Wikimedia, developers, administrators, and the people worldwide, the goal will be reached. First, we must start a wiki.

For that purpose, a medical dictionary wiki (name pending) has been proposed to accommodate the development of a copyleft medical resource. As well as information about the illness in question, articles on the medical dictionary wiki would contain information on how to treat/cure the illness and wherever in particular to go for information. While this wiki would get into specifics, each reader is reminded that the website is for background information. It would not be a replacement for a medical professional, nor even WmMD can make this claim.

A highly controversial aspect of this proposal is the legality of offering such information. By law, only medical doctors may give medical advice; however, a medical dictionary wiki would not be giving medical advice per se — it would be relaying medical advice from legitimate sources, including scientific journals and critically acclaimed medical references on the Internet. Additionally, a mechanism may be set up to accommodate tagging people as medical professionals via a verification process through the post, allowing original research under the condition that the author indeed knows and understands the subject. It may be years before such a classification network is established, but the idea is that we are to use references with trusted veracity.

Michael noticed that Netflix made a minor change and is now using "suggestions" instead of "recommendations". You have 1003 from 656 ratings.

In related news, Kate wants Netflix to "turn off" Netflix recommendations. I never look at them. Please stop recommending movies to me. I never look at them. I don't want to look at them, and I don't care what anyone else watches. Please delete them from my account and don't recommend any more ever."

How would you rate the Netflix recommendations, or, suggestions?

HOTTEST AD SPACE IN TIMES SQUARE MAY BE ON TOURISTS' CAMERAS

Also, if you are a blogger in this space and would like to have a review copy of the report, please send an email to Tracy Sullivan [tsullivan@forrester.com] with your name and URL of your blog. I'd love to get feedback on how useful you find this approach. Update: If your blog is affiliated with a sizable company, you may be getting a friendly call or email from a Forrester salesperson to see if you're interested in receiving more research from Forrester. This is because I need to walk a fine line between giving away research to potential customers and providing review copies for bloggers. Hope you understand, and let me know if you have any questions about this.
