Activision reckons new Call of Duty has beat all previous first and five-day entertainment industry records

It just can't stop breaking records! Publisher Activision has announced that Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2 has sold over 5 million copies since its release, making it the fastest game ever to sell 5 million units. The company believes that this is the best five-day launch in the history of entertainment – including video games, cinema and books.

Previous records were held by the Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince ($394m) and The Dark Knight ($303.8m).

In addition, Microsoft has confirmed some impressive Xbox Live numbers. On the first day of release alone over 3.2m multiplayer hours were logged in the game, with over 2.2m unique gamers having a go – the latter being a new Xbox Live record.

Over 1.1m Achievements were unlocked in the game in the first 24 hours.

'On just five days of sell-through Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2 has become the largest entertainment launch in history and a pop culture phenomenon,' Activision CEO Bobby Kotick stated.

leveraging networks

The screenshot shows a presentation slide titled "Leveraging Networks And Social Media Teigland" by "Dr. Robin Teigland". The slide features a network diagram with blue dots connected by lines. Text on the slide includes "Leveraging Networks and Social Media in a Multinational Company May 2009" and "Stockholm School of Economics". The slide is embedded on a Slideshare page with various sharing options like "Share", "Get File", and "More...".

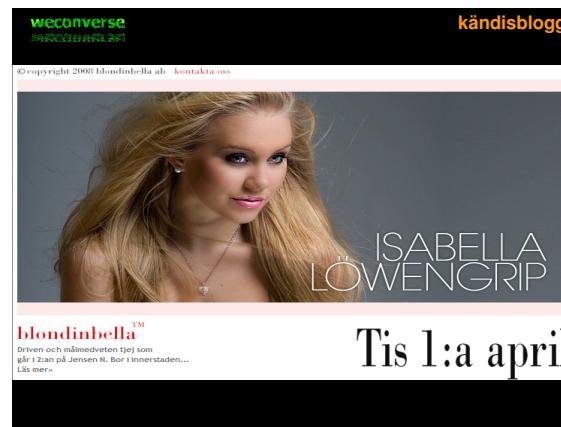

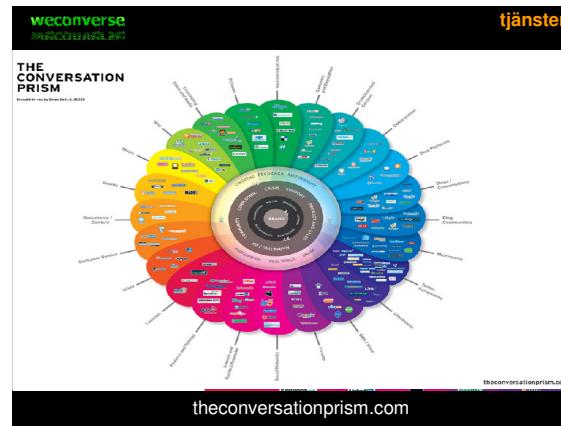

en stor sak

The screenshot shows a news article from Mashable titled "Facebook Slams Twitter: FarmVille is Bigger Than You". The article discusses statistics from Facebook and FarmVille. It includes a small image of the FarmVille logo and a Twitter bird icon.

Yesterday we got new stats from Facebook, including the passing of the 350 million user milestone. An interesting tidbit came out in a UK press event on Tuesday, where a Facebook exec pointed out that there are apparently more active users in the Facebook app Farmville than on all of Twitter.

Memories from the Beijing Olympics

Posted: August 26, 2008 10:58:07 AM

Now that the 29th Olympic Games have come to a close, I've been thinking back to all the memorable moments over the past few weeks. There were a lot of surprises, victories, many upsets and many world records.

To me, and I'm sure to many of you, these Olympics will be remembered because of Michael Phelps and his eight gold medals in swimming, making his total career medal count 14 - more than any other Olympian.

I find Michael Phelps' journey very inspiring. Not only does he have . . .

HOTTEST AD SPACE IN TIMES SQUARE MAY BE ON TOURISTS' CAMERAS

Advertisers have long been drawn to Times Square as a valuable place to reach consumers, paying hundreds of thousands of dollars for space on billboards and blaring video screens, reports The New York Times. "But recently, they have discovered that down on the ground, new technology has given low-cost, face-to-face marketing campaigns something of a cutting edge as consumers spread their messages on the Internet."

... As a result of the growing popularity of consumer-generated pictures, videos and e-mail messages on Internet sites like YouTube and MySpace, advertisers are getting consumers to essentially do their jobs for them.

When Target, the discount store operator, suspended the magician David Blaine above Times Square for two days during the week of Thanksgiving, videos shot by viewers were posted on YouTube and viewed more than 19,000 times.

On sites like YouTube, Flickr and MySpace, an army of tourists and residents are spreading advertisers' messages well beyond Manhattan, using their cell phones and video cameras as they walk through the marketing crossroads of the world.

Integrating information with the real world

ABOUT

'SixthSense' is a wearable gestural interface that augments the physical world around us with digital information and lets us use natural hand gestures to interact with that information.

We've evolved over millions of years to sense the world around us. When we encounter something, somewhere or some place, we use our five natural senses to perceive information about it. That information helps us make decisions and choose the right actions to take. But arguably the most useful information that can help us make the right decision is not naturally perceptible with our five senses, namely the data, information and knowledge that mankind has accumulated about everything and which is increasingly all available online. Although the miniaturization of computing devices allows us to carry computers in our pockets, keeping us continually connected to the digital world, there is no way for us to easily integrate digital information with the physical world around us, either traditionally on paper or digitally on a screen. SixthSense bridges this gap, bringing intangible, digital information out into the tangible world, and allowing us to interact with this information via natural hand gestures. SixthSense frees information from its confines by seamlessly integrating it with reality, and thus making the entire world your computer.
